We're looking for reports on today's Raw show in Melbourne, Australia, as well as today's Smackdown show in Des Moines (Sheamus vs. Alberto Del Rio vs. Wade Barrett; Randy Orton vs. Dolph Ziggler), today's TNA show in Bowie, MD at Prince George Stadium as well as last night's TNA show in Richmond, VA at dave@wrestlingobserver.com.

The only major show tomorrow is a WWE Smackdown show in Madison, WI. Raw will be Monday night live from Chicago. Smackdown is being taped on Tuesday night in Moline, IL.

THE LATEST OBSERVER: UFC 151 cancelled, history of SummerSlam

We've got a number of major features in this week's Observer, with two lead stories, the entire Jon Jones/Dana White situation and why UFC 151 was canceled, and the History of SummerSlam dating back 25 years. We also look at Masakatsu Funaki's winning the Triple Crown, including a look back at the Triple Crown history and the belts that form the crown.

We look at the arguments for and against what Jon Jones did, why the show was canceled, the various different things that nobody talks about that led to cancellation, the actions of Dana White, the problems with Jon Jones, the role of Chael Sonnen, what really went down, who knew what based on what people are saying and the time line, comments from Jones and why he's lost so much popularity, the business effect on Toronto, the deception, Lyoto Machida, the realities of promoting this style of fighting, why Sonnen isn't getting the shot in Toronto, why certain things have been blamed that have nothing to do with the show being canceled and more and a look at short and long-term effect on both Jones and the UFC business and where this could have been even more disastrous. We look at the fallacy of Jones and White defenders as well as those who blame Henderson.

The other lead story looks at the history of SummerSlam, looking at the shows, the memories, the business, the greatest matches, the most enduring stars, a look at every main event and business behind the scenes at the time. We look at Ultimate Warrior being fired at SummerSlam, why SummerSlam never returned to Wembley Stadium, the Hulk Hogan era vs. the Steve Austin era, the best and worst shows and how looking at matches changes with hindsight. We also look at what went wrong with Lex Luger, the move that nearly killed the boom period before it started, the biggest match business wise in history, special guests and the background of the Hogan vs. Michaels match.

The issue is currently on the site if you are a web site member. We also have a new back issue on the site from 1995 just put up going back in time and talking about one of the worst WWF PPV shows, the 1995 King of the Ring and all the news from that time period.

The Wrestling Observer ranges weekly from 35,000 to 50,000 words covering pro wrestling and MMA internationally. Each issue has coverage and analysis of all the major news, plus every issue breaks major news stories before the Internet sties and has the most complete look at the pro wrestling and MMA business anywhere, plus history pieces available nowhere else.

The Observer is now in its 29th year of being the leading insider pro wrestling publication in the world. The biggest and most influential names in the pro wrestling and MMA industry, from bookers to promoters to Hall of Fame wrestlers and fighters to the biggest names on camera and behind the scenes, along with thousands of readers in all 50 states and more than 30 countries subscribe. Many have subscribed for 20 years or longer consecutively. They get the most detailed and inside coverage of what is going on all over the world. Everywhere from Wall Street to the major offices to television networks in the U.S. and Japan turn to the Observer for what is going on in the business.

If you are a new subscriber ordering 24 or more issues, you can get one free classic issue of your choice sent to you today. We also look at the sale of WWE's Canadian broadcast outlet and what it means, secret blading, celebrities saying they are doing WrestleMania, Mysterio concussion note, more on Tyler Reks quitting and why, as well as what he's doing and his background. We also have updates on injuries to both The Rock and Steve Austin, as well as what both are up to. We have more on Austin at Mania this year, the arrest of Cameron, another WWE injury that has changed a lot of main events, WWE touring this week, TV skits, video game releases, and notes on the new TV show. We also look at the latest WWE camp for prospective wrestlers and the latest on a number of new WWE signees and their background. We also have all the business notes from the past week and highlights from all the weekend shows.

We also look back at the origins of modern MMA and how it came from pro wrestling, and how the man who was part of its beginnings in 1993 is now a pro wrestling world champion with Masakatsu Funaki's Triple Crown win. We look at how Japanese MMA got started, his role, and why he's back in wrestling and won the title. We also look at the business of this year's Money in the Bank compared with the previous two years, as well as a rundown of WWE's July business in a number of categories.

We also have an update on the Linda McMahon campaign for senate and a major turn over the past week.

We also have a look at the ratings of all the major shows and complete details on how every segment of Raw and Impact this past week did. We look at what segments gained and lost viewers

We also have results from all the major league arena events over the past week as well as a look at all the major television shows. Also in this week's issue:

You can order the book the same way you order the newsletter.

Saturday's news update --Somebody please hire Jon Jones a PR agent. So far today, we've had Franklin McNeil at ESPN report that Jones was going to pay the fighters who lost their fights tonight their guarantees as a PR move, but now has decided against it because so many of them were so negative toward him. Then on Twitter, when someone wrote to him, "Thanks to Johnny Bones I have no plans tonight," he wrote back, "Thanks to the old man and his knee, I don't either."
--Tom "Tiny" Lister, who was Zeus in WWF and Puerto Rico for a few pro wrestling matches more than 20 years ago (and a brief WCW comeback), has agreed to plead guilty for conspiring to commit mortgage fraud. According to the plea agreement obtained by TMZ.com, Lister admitted to being one of several individuals who obtained mortgages on four different homes in Los Angeles by use of false information and fraudulent bank statements. In doing so, they collected $5.7 million, then defaulted on all four loans, costing the lenders $2.6 million. Lister also admitted to obtaining $1.1 million in additional loans, which he never paid back, using the properties as collateral. He will be sentenced in September and is facing up to five years in federal prison.

--There was a concept show held today in Newcastle, Australia, but we don't have any reports on it. The show, called Combat 8, puts boxers vs. MMA fighters, headlined by Les Piper of Australia's contender vs. Justin Murray, an MMA fighter. The rules are no kicking, elbows or knees. Only one takedown is allowed per round and there is a 30 second clock on the ground to get a finish. Fights are taking place in a squared cage and they have plans for shows in October and November.

--Go out of your way to watch the video of Hiroshi Tanahashi's IWGP title win over Kazuchika Okada. Tanahashi may be the best all-around in-ring performer combined with being among the most charismatic guys in the business today.
