We're looking for your thoughts on today's New Japan iPPV as well as Friday night's UFC on FX show, so you can leave a thumbs up, thumbs down or thumbs in the middle along with a best and worst match for each show to dave@wrestlingobserver.com

We're also looking for reports on these shows tonight:

*Raw Sunday in Spokane, WA

*Smackdown Sunday in Reno

*Raw Saturday night in Yakima, WA

*Smackdown last night in Anaheim Saturday

*TNA Friday night in Hot Springs, AR

*TNA Saturday night in Fort Smith, AR

Today is Smackdown and Main Event tapings in San Jose. Randy Orton vs. Big Show will be the taped main event for Main Event.

Both WWE and UFC set record low ratings this past week for their flagship television shows. In the new issue of the Wrestling Observer Newsletter, we look at what led to the low Raw numbers as well as what was the star segment of the show, how when people usually turn off Raw, they skyrocketed and what segments lost audience. We also look at the plight of Ultimate Fighter, as well as history on Raw battling football as the season goes on. The issue will be up later today on the web site. A new back issue from 1995 is currently on the site.

We also have a look at Brock Lesnar's financial value to WWE so far, and if he's worth his massive pay. We look at how Extreme Rules and SummerSlam did, including some very strange results that are hard to explain. We also look at why Lesnar is likely to be offered a new contract by WWE when this one expires.

We also look at the former WWE star and Hall of Famer who had been in secret negotiations and why they fell through at present.

We also have a look at the latest ESPN poll on the popularity of WWE, UFC and Boxing across every age group. The poll is interesting because the general public perception of who is actually most interested in all three genres, and even television ratings, tell a very different story. We also look at how boxing and wrestling's popularity have changed over the past decade and why one of the three has the best chance of increasing for reasons few have really picked up on.

The poll shows a lot about where WWE may be making mistakes with their approach. It also has Lorenzo Fertitta talking about how his sport has decreased in popularity in recent years and his reaction to it.

We also look at New Japan opening up in the iPPV business on an international basis this week. We look at how the Japanese marketplace makes iPPV more viable than the U.S. marketplace. We also look at attempts over the years to market Japanese pro wrestling in the U.S. We also look at the first card, with notes on all the participants and every match.

We also have a full rundown of the UFC show in Nottingham, England, with background on the show, all the financial numbers, injury notes, judging and match-by-match coverage.

We also have a story on the departure of Kelly from WWE, talking about the background of how it all went down, how she got started in pro wrestling to begin with, why so many people have been leaving WWE, and what is next for her.

We also have a major feature looking at the 2013 WrestleMania, including directions for all the major names. We look at why one match up where the angle was shot a long ways back is unlikely to happen. We look at different potential usages of big names, as well as what people internally have said about Undertaker.

We also update Hell in a Cell, update Jerry Lawler and John Cena. We also look at a former star looking at returning, the tag team tournament, what department in WWE is undergoing major changes, notes on house shows, an update on Edge and his neck surgery, Randy Orton's schedule for the next few weeks, WWE stars talk about their backgrounds, notes on another tryout camp, C.M. Punk's schedule this past week, WWE's relationship with Full Sail University in Florida, Michael Cole's new role, update on Steve Austin, as well as business notes from WWE over the past week and details of all the weekend house shows.

We also have a look at Bobby Jagers, a star in the 70s and 80s in a number of territories, who passed away this past week. He look at his style, his career, and his heyday in different

Today's News, Notes and Links

-- TMZ.com has a story on the CM Punk incident last night including a very clear and very close-up video of what happened. Punk was shoved by two different fans, but the fan he hit was neither of them and didn't appear to have done anything wrong. According to the story, the man talked to police last night and didn't appear to have any significant injuries, but then later in the evening he called them back and complained of pain in his knee. Police have taken a statement and are now determining whether to investigate the matter.

The clearest video of the incident appears to be here .

WWE's official response to the incident: "During last night's Raw televised event, WWE Superstar CM Punk exited the ring into the stands as part of the show. WWE security was unfortunately not in the appropriate place at the time. Given CM Punk's persona as a 'bad guy,' fans were naturally heckling him, but unfortunately a few fans began shoving him and one struck in him in the kidney and on the back. WWE regrets that proper security measures were not in place, and CM Punk apologizes for reacting in the heat of the moment. Other than this isolated incident, WWE always provides proper security to ensure the safety of our fans and our performers."

-- Dario Teyes admitted on Twitter that he was the guy who hit Punk in the kidneys and started the entire fracas. He noted that Punk hit an innocent guy and was laughing about it, noting that he was helping to make the guy a millionaire. I've seen dumber things, but this one is way up there.

-- Well, this is an unfortunate coincidence. WWE returns to Sacramento for a Smackdown taping on January 22nd. The presale code on TicketMaster is, swear to God, SMACKFAN.

-- All wrestling all the time for TMZ today: Tammy Sytch arrested for fourth time in four weeks . It was said she was intoxicated during this arrest and that bail is set at $25,000. She had just gotten out of rehab. Speaking of unfortunate coincidences, the Sytch Youshoot from Kayfabe Commentaries came out today and the headline of the press release reads: A SNAPSHOT OF FUN, SOBER TAMMY SYTCH EMERGES ON NEW "YOUSHOOT"

-- Nearly every report we got from last night, and we've gotten many obviously based on what happened, stated that Ryback was ridiculously over with the Raw crowd.

-- Hulk Hogan's attorney has also filed a police report this morning regarding the sex tape that surfaced on Gawker.com involving Hogan and Bubba the Love Sponge's ex-wife Heather Clem. Hogan admitted the woman in the video was Heather this morning on the Howard Stern show. He claimed nobody knew who filmed it or who released the film, and said he did not believe Bubba, who gave him permission to have sex with his wife, was responsible. The story is here .

Hogan also admitted the incident happened while he was still married but estranged from Linda Bollea. Previously he had claimed that it had happened between the time of their divorce and when he met his new wife.

-- Should note that if you haven't listened yet, and if you are a subscriber I'd be stunned if that were the case, last night's Observer Radio has about an hour worth of news on everything that went down yesterday, plus Dave's epic rave of the New Japan iPPV. A really fun show.

-- Speaking of, the New Japan iPPV will be available on uStream until late Wednesday night.

-- Although Sara McMann vs. Liz Carmouche, Luke Rockhold vs. Lorenz Larkin and Daniel Cormier vs. Frank Mir have all fallen apart due to injury, and despite rumors all day yesterday about the future of Strikeforce, at the moment the November 3rd event is still going to take place.

-- DaMarques Johnson confirmed today that he has been cut by the UFC.

-- Travis Browne is out 3-4 months with a torn hamstring suffered in the early moments of his fight with Bigfoot Silva Friday night. He noted he won't need surgery.

-- UFC Countdown show for this weekend's Brazil PPV airs tonight 9 p.m. Eastern 6 p.m. Pacific on Fuel.

-- Jeremy Stephens finally had a bail price set -- $100,000. He was meeting with a judge today.

-- Bad night for ratings Friday. UFC on FX 5 ended up doing 1.1 million viewers and the prelims on FUEL averaged 44,000, both below average. Bellator's season debut did 145,000, also well below average. Smackdown's rating also dropped again this week.

-- New interview with Paul Heyman talking about how the new WWE deal was just right place, right time, here .
