The newest issue of the Wrestling Observer Newsletter, for this coming Monday, just went up on the web site earlier today, which has the complete WrestleMania show, and notes on the hottest programs on the show. We also have a look at every controversy coming out of UFC 127, more on Mistico in WWE, Strikeforce's future big shows and plans for the rest of the year, and more on the biggest threats facing both the UFC and WWE business years from now.

Our lead story covers WrestleMania 27, with a match-by-match breakdown, including what staple of the show is no longer there, and the building of the Rock/Cena angle.

We also look at UFC 127, including business numbers, ratings numbers, what the ratings show, early PPV numbers. We look at what long-term major match fell apart, at the welterweight division going forward, Fitch vs. Penn judging and round two in detail, Dana White's view on the fight, polls on the fight, what pro wrestler debuted on the UFC show and White's reaction to him, and all the Michael Bisping vs. Jorge Rivera controversy, how it started why it started and how real it was or wasn't. We've also got match-by-match coverage and poll results on the show.

The issue is up today on the web site and a second issue from late 1993 will be up later this week on the site. You can sign up on the front page, and all issues from recent years are in the newsletter archives tab. Each month there are approximately ten Observers and four new Figure Four Weeklies added to the site along with several audio shows daily and coverage of every major event in pro wrestling and MMA.

You can also order print copies of the Observer with details below.

We look at the WWE and CMLL press conferences on Thursday regarding Mistico. We look at Jim Ross' comments at the press conference, Smackdown vs. Raw for him, the history of Latino stars on Smackdown, the challenges facing the former Mistico, now Sin Cara, in WWE, as well as the CMLL reaction to losing its top star.

We also look at how "The Chaperone" did in its small theatrical release, and a lot more on newcomers signed by WWE in recent weeks and their background. We also look at the WWE All-Stars roster, WWE comes back to Mexico, business notes from both the foreign and domestic shows this past week and highlights from all the WWE house shows.

We also have more on CMLL's first major show of the year, and the CMLL and AAA situation in Mexico as WWE has gotten network caliber television.

We also look at the future of Strikeforce and the heavyweight tournament.

We also look at the problems facing UFC and WWE going forward, as well as how it affects other sports.

We've got coverage of the ROH 9th anniversary show as well as how the iPPV did.

We've got notes on the Royal Rumble buy rate, both domestic and international, as well as early indications on Elimination Chamber and Against All Odds.

We've got ratings of all the national shows including how every segment on Raw did the past two weeks, the impact of the return of Rock, HHH and Undertaker, how their segments did, and what superstar segments did not do well, as well as how every segment of Impact did this past week. We look at what audience has grown the most since the return of The Rock, and unique things about the TNA ratings this week.

We also have our usual weekly features with results of the major arena shows from around the world, and the major TV show rundowns and reviews.

The Wrestling Observer ranges from 25,000 to 40,000 words covering pro wrestling and MMA all over the world.

Each issue has coverage and analysis of all the major news, plus every issue breaks major news stories before the Internet sites and has the most complete look at the business as a whole anywhere. notes that despite UFC listing in a release that UFC 131 would be 6/11 in Vancouver at Rogers Arena, that UFC Director of Canadian Operations Tom Wright said that no deal is finalized and no announcement should have been made. UFC has been working on closing the deal for months, and Wright said they remain positive that the deal will be completed, but it has not been signed and agreed to by the city of Vancouver.

--We've got an article on Cris Cyborg and WWE rumors at <http://www.yahoo.com>

in the UFC section. Suffice to say she is under contract to Strikeforce so WWE would need their approval to use her. Unlike UFC, they would likely be amenable to doing so. But WWE is likely not amenable to promoting on their television under contract to another organization unless they are a celebrity like Brock Lesnar who can make them big money. However, she is in the process of negotiating a new Strikeforce deal. WWE denied ever making her a contract offer.

--John Cena promises a "final knockout" of The Rock in an interview he will do on Monday night on Raw. Hopefully it's better than the one he did this past Monday.

--On the NXT show that airs in New Zealand, at the start of the show they had John Cena give a message dedicating the show to victims of the recent earthquake and praising the firefighters, Red Cross and rescue workers. (thanks to Nicholas Graves)

--Dana White on Thursday night's post-fight show on Versus said that he believed the knee Michael Bisping threw was intentional and that Bisping is in a lot of trouble. Marc Ratner has been quoted as saying that the ref should have disqualified Bisping or at least deducted two points instead of one.

--There were Bellator ads on the screen on Spike TV late this week. Spike is heavily promoting the show which is very interesting. (thanks to Jeff Gagliardo)

--Pope D'Angelo Dinero was in the front row at the UFC show in Louisville (I believe he lives there. and if not, certainly has lots of friends there due to all his time in OVW). He was sitting next to Pat Barry, but he left before the television portion of the show started. He may have been friends with Cyrille Diabate since he was jumping up and down and cheering for him, and then left after his fight ended (thanks to Ehren Schaffter)
